Description

This challenge is meant to mimic those creepy ransom letters that are made from letters of magazines but in this it's a stalker that is in love with the receiver. You are the police officer that was assigned this case and it is your job to find out who sent it.

Prompt

You are a police officer for the NYPD, stationed in lower Manhattan. Some guy received this letter on his door today as he was leaving for his first Valentine's Day date for the day..yikes. He's creeped out and stated this isn't the first time but he's getting fed up and needs it to stop. Find the sender of the letter so the NYPD can press charges on the stalker and put them to justice!

Hints

1. Do you think the message has some kind of deeper meaning?
2. Try looking at the typography of the magazine pieces. I think finding out the magazine itself will tell you who sent it!
3. Is there one person that's famously correlated to the company that published that magazine? Maybe an editor?

Solution

1. After reading the letter, there's two key parts of it that can be used for the initial clues on the flag.

First is the line "Fellas that were in the mood. Don't just stand there, let's get to it."

This is a lyric from Madonna's Vogue

Second is the typography of the letters. Particularly the big letters that are often used in a specific magazine.. Vogue

2. From those two clues, also from the prompt that you are an officer from NYPD stationed in LOWER MANHATTAN indicated that the creator used the vogue magazine and has some power there as they said I am this place

3. From there, they will have to look for who is famously associated with Vogue magazine and look at who is the most impactful person there. Which is Anna Wintour
